Bandits Hold Up Train in South;
Get Away With $100,000 in Cash*By United Press.

Three masked bandits, who held up the Alabama Great Southern Express last night between Englishwood and Tuscaloosa, escaped with $100,000 after demolishing the express safe, according to trainmen who arrived here at 7 o'clock this morning.

Trainmen told thrilling stories. As the train pulled into Mobile it was found that the block signal had been found. When Engineer Daniels got down to investigate one of the bandits shot at a porter who was on the train. A second man held guard over the mail and baggage car and the third ordered Fireman Johnson to cut the first two cars from the rest of the train. Johnson refused and the bandit struck him with the butt of the revolver. He then forced the engineer and fireman to do as they wished.

When the mail clerks were ordered to leave the car they refused and a volley of bullets was sent through the compartment. The trainmen were then driven to the rear of the train while the bandits fled the auto and car with three loads of dynamite.

BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 26.—Deputy Sheriff James Donner was killed by a Montgomery county deputy sheriff who mistook him for one of the bandits that held up the Alabama Great Southern Express near Mobile last night. The posses were searching the woods near Cottonville. Additional posses are working between Hillyville and Tuscaloosa this afternoon. Orders have been given to the members of the posses to avoid a repetition of this morning's tragedy.

Only 25 men turned out to hear the proposed $50,000,000 bond issue for road making in this state and to discuss bond issue as necessary for highways for paved streets and sewers.

Mr. Adams confined himself to a discussion of the merits of the amendment. Without going into the reasons why good roads would be a benefit to the commonwealth, he explained that the amendment, which has been going through the necessary legal steps for four years and is now in shape to be submitted to the people, merely gives the Legislature power to issue $50,000,000 in bonds for road construction and improvement. If the amendment passes it will be up to the Legislature to decide in what sums the bonds are to be issued, the denominations and rate of interest, as well as the material of the new roads are to be constructed.

The speaker described the progress of road legislation in the state from its beginning down to the present. He said that the present bill is a step forward in the construction of good roads and that it will be a boon to the state.

Shultz, who was a little over a mile away, where he figured it would achieve the best results. Ridenour retaliated with his drum stick, aiming at the Colonel's head. Shultz then a policeman intervened and prevented further hostilities.

Why is the soda cracker today such a universal food?

People ate soda crackers in the old days, it is true—but they bought them from a barrel or box and took them home in a paper bag, their crispness and flavor all gone.

Unedea Biscuit—soda crackers better than any ever made before—made in the greatest bakeries in the world—baked to perfection—packed to perfection—kept to perfection until you take them, oven-fresh and crisp, from their protecting package. Five cents.

Putting Trees to Bed.
An interesting method of protecting peach trees from frost during the winter has been practiced for several years at the agricultural experiment station at Canyon, Colo. Early in November the earth is removed from a circle about four feet in diameter round each tree, and water is turned in to saturate the soil. When the ground has become soft the tree is worked back and forth to loosen the roots and is then pushed over on its side. The branches are brought together and fastened with a cord, and burlap covered with earth is put over them.

Thus the trees lie snug until spring, when the covering is gradually loosened and finally removed, and they are raised and propped up.—Rocky Mountain News.

But She Hadn't.
"What's the matter, old chap? You look as if you hadn't had a wink of sleep all night."
"I haven't. You see, my wife threatened never to speak to me again if I didn't come home last night before 10 o'clock, and I didn't."
"I see. You're finding out the loneliness of solitude because she kept her word, eh?"
"Not by a jugful. I wish she had."

A First Street Story.
Henry Arthur Broome, in "The Log of a Rolling Stone," says that in 1871 he was engaged to marry a girl named Punch when one day, at the end of the week, short of money, he stood gazing longingly at the cherries on a coster-woman's barrow which stood abreast of the offices of the London Telegraph. His gaze arrested the attention of a gentleman whom he had often seen there before, though not at midday.

Then a kindly deed was done. The gentleman, averting his gaze from me a moment, purchased two paper bags of this fruit. Then, placing one of them in the pocket of his capacious waistcoat, he turned to me with the sweetest smile imaginable and without a word offered the other one to me, which I gratefully accepted. He then passed on and went upstairs to the offices of the newspaper. That was my first introduction to the prince of journalists, George Augustus Sala.

Japanese "Movies."
Even the remotest towns in Japan have their moving picture shows, and in large cities they seem to be nearly as plentiful as on this side of the Pacific. In Yokohama there is a whole street of them, and, as the program of each is endless, and each picture is announced in huge symbols on a separate variegated banner flying from a tall bamboo pole, the aspect of Theater street is startlingly unique. The pictures illustrating the sensational points of the programs above the entrances and at their sides have a certain quaintness about them, which is accentuated by the fact that they are all originals, not mere stereotyped advertisements printed in raw colors. The "gates" or wooden sandals of the spectators are deposited on a rack before the entrance to a moving picture show, for where other people take off their hats the Japanese leave their shoes.—Popular Mechanics.

DID CHILD WAKE UP CROSS OR FEVERISH?

Look Mother! If Tongue Is Coated Give "California Syrup of Figs" to Clean the Bowels.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. Now if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleaning at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills also a constipant, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 2-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Counterfeits are being sold here. Don't be fooled—Adv.

FRIDAY EVENING, SEPT. 26, 1913.

PUBLIC RIGHT AND INTEREST.

The report that the Baltimore & Ohio railroad management will remove some fifty trainmen from Connelville to Connelville as a measure of retaliation for the alleged petty persecutions of the railroad for blocking crossings is interesting to Connelville and perhaps also to Uniontown.

There are doubters as to the wisdom of the Baltimore & Ohio management. They will be wise to examine into their conduct carefully and see if they cannot be reasonably block street crossings, neither should they unreasonably annoy in their operation.
It is a matter of common knowledge that Uniontown public sentiment has never been extremely cordial toward the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, while it has been the reverse in Connelville, which fact may partly account for the determination announced.

In regarding the public rights, officials should be careful that they do not seriously injure the public interest.

THE BAND COMBINE.

The latest proposed industrial combine sounds well. It is proposed to merge the two Connelville military bands into one large and highly efficient organization. The proposition is said to have official military sanction. In fact, the failure is threatened with unpleasant reprisals from that quarter.

The proposed musical combine is not likely to be opposed by the Attorney General of the United States as a combination in restraint of trade and consequently unlawful, and the Connelville public will hope that it will not prove to be a combination in restraint of free open air music in the pleasant summer time, but there will necessarily be some doubt.

The keen rivalry between the two musical organizations undoubtedly stimulated the open air concert this summer in spite of the unusually uncertain and often very inclement weather, but we will rely upon that professional pride which a fine organization will naturally encourage to prompt its frequent public appearance when it has become unrivaled and without opposition.

The Connelville coke trade is free from one of the annoyances of shippers during the winter season, namely, the shortage of car supply. The coke trade is a regular and profitable traffic. It is light-weighted business. The railroads have learned how to look after the industries that lay the golden eggs, especially since revenues no longer break into the income tax, but have to be rounded up out on the boundless realm of commercialism.

The Young Men's Christian Association has opened up its winter campaign.

The legality of the non-partisan but not law is still under fire in spite of the pretty progressive deliberations of policy makers.

The State Constabulary has been much opposed and greatly rebuffed by those who know it not. It is, however, becoming known by its deeds and not by the words of its critics. The State Constabulary has come to stay.

A day-on locomotive engineer escaped the dangers of the fall for a lifetime only to fracture his leg by falling from his own porch, but he has the consolation of knowing that he was home when misfortune overtook him.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the country has been driven from drink by the intolerance of the modern female attire.

The story of the watch that ran for two years in a running stream of water should engage the earnest attention of the world of invention.

Baseball contests every inch of the ground with football.

The out-front-increase rule now in force on the West Penn trolley system works so smoothly that one wonders why it was not devised long ago.

The Secretary of the Navy says the Government armor plate plant is in an embryonic state. It is right in Connelville's class.

Connellville will have a Greek veteran when Jimmy Ferrus comes marching home.

The bite of the spider is poisonous, but if we eradicate the spiders the work of the fly-swatter will be greatly increased.

WE'RE GOING TO MOVE

Three more days in our present location and then we are going to move.

On a day early in May, when the F. W. Woolworth Company signed a lease for the Presbyterian Church property, we signed a lease with the Woolworth Company for one of the store-rooms to be erected. While not absolutely bound by the terms of the lease, their representative assured us that possession could be had by October 1st.

They have made good.

With unusual interest people have noted the daily progress in the construction of the building. As it has neared completion interest and even enthusiasm has increased.

WHY WE'RE MOVING.

Three times in ten years we've moved. Each time to a larger and better located store-room. A rapidly growing business requires space to expand. Our present quarters are too small. Our facilities for display are limited. In the new room we will double our present floor space and more than double our display windows. Best of all, the new room will be a daylight store. Large sky-lights, with light from the front and rear, will make the display of clothing a pleasure to our salesmen and a source of the greatest satisfaction to our customers.

In the matter of location, our new store will be on the main street in the heart of the business district where the trolley traffic centers, and will, we believe, be more convenient and accessible to our friends.

A NEW DEPARTMENT.

It has long been our ambition to conduct a complete men's and boys' outfitting establishment. This ambition is realized in the opening of the new Men's and Boys' Shoe Department. Here on one floor, under ideal conditions, in a men's store, with every modern convenience for the comfort and pleasure of our friends can be purchased every article of wearing apparel for Men and Boys.

A NEW DESIGNER.

Mr. Emilio, while on his vacation in his home city this summer, was offered a position which he accepted. His successor is Mr. Robert Johnston of New York City. Mr. Johnston is a designer and cutter of men's garments of proven ability. He comes to us with the endorsement of leading fashion authorities in New York and Boston and will maintain the high standard set by our Tailoring Department in the past three years.

OUR MOVING SCHEDULE.

The store will be closed all day Monday for the purpose of taking inventory.

Tuesday morning we will begin to move.

Wednesday we expect to complete the moving, and on Thursday we hope to be ready for business in the new store.

After October 1st, the business will be conducted under the name of The Horner Company, of which Mr. Horner will be President and General Manager, and Mr. S. B. Dobbie will be Secretary and Treasurer.

OPENING.

Our formal opening will be held on Thursday, October 9th, during the style show, and we will be pleased to greet all our old friends and many new ones.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS:

To you whose patronage has contributed to the growth and development of this successful enterprise, we extend our cordial thanks. We appreciate your patronage. We are glad to have had the privilege of serving you, and are preparing to serve you better. To all we extend a cordial greeting and an invitation to visit the new store. Drop in for a look whether you wish to make a purchase or not. A welcome awaits you, and a desire to serve you acceptably is the main spring of our efforts.

The Maids of Paradise

By Robert W. Chambers
Author of "The City of Dreadful Night," "The Case of the White Horse," etc.

Illustrations by
O. Irwin Myers

"Come on, then," I said, pushing my way through the outskirts of the crowd to the mayor's house.

The mayor was lying in his armchair, frightened, sulky, obstinate, his fat form swathed in a red sash.

"O-ho!" I said, sharply, "so you already wear the colors of the revolution, do you?"

"Dance, they did it over my waistcoat," he said, "and there are no garments to help me arrest them."

"Never mind that just now," I interrupted; "what I want to know is why you wrote the governor of Lorien to expel our circus?"

"That's my own affair," he snapped; "besides, who said I wrote?"

"Idiot," I said, "somebody paid you to do it. Who was it?"

The mayor looked slyly at me out of the corner of his mottled eye, but he remained mute.

"Very well," said I; "when the troops from Lorien hear of this revolution in Paradise, they'll come and chase these rascals like the sea. And after that they'll stand up against a conventional wall and give you thirty seconds for absolution."

"Stop!" burst out the mayor, struggling to his feet. "What am I to do? This gentleman, Monsieur Duckhurst, will play me if I don't obey him! Besides," he began to bluster, "I'm mayor of Paradise, and I won't be bullied! You get out of here with your circus and your foolish, imprudent ideas! I haven't any quarrels with you, but you must go."

"I better start, all the same," he said. "Oh," I said, "before night? Why before night?"

"Wait and see them," he muttered. "Anyway, get out of my house—bye-bye!"

"We are going to give this performance at two o'clock this afternoon," I said. "After that, another tomorrow at the same hour, and on every day at the same hour, as long as it pays. Do you understand?"

"Perfectly," assented the mayor.

Then I asked him what he would do if the circus began dropping shells into Paradise; he deliberately winked at me and thrust his tongue into his cheek.

"So you know that the circus is gone?" I asked.

He grinned.

"Do you suppose Duckhurst's men hold the reins? If they do, they sent that circus on a fool's errand," whispered Speed.

Here was a plot! I stepped to the window. Outside in the square, Duckhurst was ranging a dozen peasants in line. The peasants wore not Paradise men; they wore the costumes of the interior, and somebody had already armed them with scythes, rusty boarding-pikes, stable-forks, and one or two ill-fitting muskets. An evil-looking crew, if ever I saw one. They were the scum of Morbihan.

"Well!" muttered Speed in amazement.

After a long silence, Kelly Eyre looked at his watch. "It's time we were in the tent," he observed, dryly; and we turned away without a word. At the bridge we stopped and looked back. The red flag was flying from the mayor's house.

"I think," I said, "that we had better ride over to Trecoat after the show—not that there's any immediate danger."

"There is no immediate danger," said Speed, "because she is here."

My face began to burn; I looked at him miserably. "How do you know?"

"She is there in the tent. I saw her. Don't mistake her presence. Don't be a contemptible fool. If I have read her face—and I have never spoken to her, as you know—I tell you, Scarlett, that young girl is going through an ordeal! Do women of that kind come to shows like this to be amused?"

And he turned on his heel, leaving me speechless and dreading. When I came out into the passage-way by rambocked me, and pointed at a crack in the canvas through which one could see the interior of the amphitheater.

The show was on.

I stood in the shadow of the stable tent, dressed in my frock-coat, white stock, white cords, and hunting-boots, smiling, smiling, with a false shame that better men than I have weakened under, almost desperate in my humiliation, almost ready to end it all there among those tawny, restless brute pacing behind the bars at my elbow, watching me stealthily with luminous eyes.

She knew what I was—but that she could come to see with her own eyes I could not understand. I could not forgive. Because she had, in her precious ignorance, given me a young girl's impulsive friendship, was I to mistake her?

"Have you seen her?" whispered Speed, coming up to me, long whip trailing.

I shook my head.

He looked at me in disgust. "Here's something for you," he said, shortly, and thrust an envelope into my hand. In the envelope was a little card on which was written: "I ask you to be careful, for a friend's sake." On the other side of the card was engraved her name.

"Where is she?" I said, standing my voice, when my leading heart almost stifled.

He drew me by the elbow and looked toward the right of the amphitheater. Following the direction of his eyes, I saw her leaning forward, pale-faced, grave, small, gloved hands interlocked. Beside her sat Sylvia Elven, apparently amused at the antics of the clown.

"I will be careful," I said to Speed, in a low voice. "If it were not for Byram I would not go on today—but that is a matter of honor. Oh, Speed, I broke out, 'Is she not worth dying for?'"

"Why not live for her?" he observed, dryly.

He let go of my arm and stood back as my lion-cage came rolling out, drawn by four horses.

"It's your turn," he said, in a dazed way. "Look out for that lioness."

I entered the cage, afraid.

Almost instantly I was the center of a snarling mass of lions; I saw nothing. My whip rose and fell mechanically. I stood like one stunned, while the tawny forms leaped right and left. Suddenly I heard a keeper say, "Look out for Empress Khatoun, sir!"

And a moment later a cry, "Look out, sir!"

Something went wrong with another lion, too, for the people were standing up and shouting, and the sleeve of my coat hung from the elbow, showing my bare shoulder. I remember saying aloud: "I must keep my feet; I must not fall!" Then daylight grew red, and I was on my knees, with the hot breath of a lion in my face. A hot lion had shot across the cage. The roaring of beasts and people died out in my ears; then, with a shock, my soul seemed to be dashed out of me into a terrific darkness.

"THE GIRL OF MY DREAMS." Manager Robbins of the Soisson Theatre announces on Saturday matinee and night, September 27, the engagement of the big musical production "The Girl of My Dreams," the book of which was written by William D. Knott and Otto Hauerbach and the music by Karl Hochman, composer of "Three Wives," "Madame Sherry" and many other Broadway hits.

"The humor of the book is extremely pleasing and entertaining, and the music is not only high class but exceedingly catchy and melodious. Besides a big cast of principals, the management promises a chorus of young women who have never yet had to ask the services of a beauty doctor. They are not only pretty, but can sing and dance as well, and this is most essential as the music and dances in 'The Girl of My Dreams' are said to be the most beautiful in the theatre. There are several big song hits, including 'The Girl Who Wouldn't Spoon,' 'Love Letters,' 'O-o-o' (Maybe It's a Robber) and the tuncful 'Doctor Thinkin' This.'"

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN." Kibbie & Martin's scenic and dramatic production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be seen at the Soisson Theatre, matinee and night, Monday, September 29. The Kibbie & Martin company carries out the special scenery and effects required to give a perfect production of this old, over popular play. The company em-bodies over 50 people, a chorus of over 20 colored men and women, ponies and six man-eating bloodhounds. The escape of Dixie strikes our sympathy as no ordinary melodrama ever can, and the fortunes of Uncle Tom keep us alert and excited. The production in which Kibbie & Martin will bring to our city will be the same that has been so favorably received in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburg and large cities.

My friends expected me to die and I had been unable to get relief for no long a time. This remedy went directly to the seat of the trouble and cured me in a few hours."
